NHS Dementia Awareness Campaign - 'The more we understand the more we can help'

A recent poll found that 32% of people would find it uncomfortable to spend time with a person with dementia. Findings from the poll suggest that this is because of a lack of education about the condition or how to help someone who has it.

The NHS recently launched a Dementia Awareness Campaign in the hope to transform these views. The campaign aims to raise understanding of an illness that affects so many and provides useful tips to carers of those with dementia so they can provide the best possible help and support.

This recent drive to improve the individuals quality of life through broadening knowledge and understanding and giving them the time and respect they deserve, ties in with related dementia care courses NCC Home Learning offers: Positive Dementia Care and Dementia Awareness VRQ.

NCC offers a range of high quality dementia care related courses which can help to improve your skills and knowledge whether you are already working in this field, intend on doing so or simply have an interest in the dementia care sector.

Our Positive Dementia Care course was authored by David Sheard who set up Dementia Care Matters in 1995 and is currently director of the organisation. He has built up an extensive background of the area, providing services to older people with mental health needs and their carers. Most recently David was featured on BBC2 documentary 'Can Gerry Robertson fix dementia care?' where he successfully re-trained staff on their approach to dementia care. This vast experience has led him to produce excellent course material for NCC.
